BRITISH MART FUTURE

Macmillan, Italian Chief Join On Issue

ROME (AP) — Prime Minister Harold Macmillan teamed up Friday with Italian Premier Amintore Fanfani in a determined battle to keep alive a future for Britain in the European Common Market.

The British leader plunged into a series of crucial talks with Fanfani, a champion of the British cause, aimed at blunting the blow dealt by French President Charles de Gaulle against Britain's entry.

Shortly after Macmillan's arrival in this birthplace of the European community, he and Fanfani pledged their continued efforts to pursue European unity despite De Gaulle's veto of British membership.

Fanfani hailed Macmillan as a courageous pioneer of British participation in the economic and political integration of Europe.

"HIGHER"

The ideal of European unity is, between us, higher than ever," Fanfani declared. "And your recent words have demonstrated that Britain, too, continues to be determined by great decision."

In reply, Macmillan alluded to the French veto that wrecked months of British negotiation efforts in Brussels, home of the Common Market.

"If there are troubles," Macmillan said, "they are a spur to further efforts toward European unity in a spirit, not of rivalry but of solidarity."

A spokesman for the Italian government said the two leaders reviewed the failure at Brussels and explored ways to keep alive the mechanism of Western European economic and political integration.

Other topics included the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the role of NATO countries in nuclear armament.

Back in London, Christian A. Herter, special envoy of President Kennedy, consulted with other British leaders on the implications of Britain's exclusion from European economic and political integration. The British government assured Herter it will back the high U.S. plans for cutting tariffs and spurring world trade.

Nuclear Tests Ordered For U.S., Britain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy Friday ordered preparations for resumption of underground nuclear tests with the United States and Britain.

At the same time, Disarmament Chief William C. Foster said the United States would maintain a readiness to test as a matter of national policy, even if a test ban agreement should be reached by the three powers.

The president's action was announced by Secretary of State Dean Rusk. The secretary said there had been only the slightest progress toward a test ban and "we cannot hold out great expectation" of an agreement soon.

Rusk also told a news conference that the recent Soviet offer to permit "two-or-three" on-site inspections a year on Soviet territory was presented by the Russians on a "take it or leave it basis." He said he had hoped the issue would be negotiable.

Later Foster told a group of House Republicans that there would be hazards in a test ban. But he said these had been weighed against the advantages, and it was decided that the overall result of an end to testing would work in favor of this country.

Waiter Foils Grenade Attack

SAIGON (UPI) — A Communist agent hurled a hand grenade in a Saigon restaurant frequented by Americans Friday night, but a quick-thinking waiter picked it up and threw it out the door.

The grenade exploded harmlessly with a loud blast in the street. Witnesses said the explosive was brought into the Calypso Restaurant in downtown Saigon by a delivery boy who apparently was a Viet Cong agent. After throwing the grenade on the floor, the boy fled the restaurant and disappeared.

Two American servicemen had just left the restaurant before the incident. Witnesses said several Frenchmen sitting at the restaurant's tables apparently were taken for Americans by the Viet Cong agent.

It was the third grenade attack in the Saigon area since Tuesday, and appeared to be part of a Communist campaign of terror aimed at the assassination of U.S. fighting men in Viet Nam.

New District State Roads Head Named

George P. Forman
Appointed; Ruston
Man Is Promoted

George P. Forman of Monroe has been named district engineer in the fifth highway district succeeding the late Ellis Ross.

Everett M. Wilder, of Ruston, has been promoted to the post of assistant district engineer in charge of maintenance, which formerly was held by Forman.

Announcement of the two promotions was made Friday by State Highway Director Ray W. Burgess.

ACTING

Forman has been serving as acting district engineer since Sept. 10 last year — two days after Mr. Ross became ill. Mr. Ross died in October.

A native of Greenville, Ga., Forman is a 1929 graduate of the University of Georgia where he received a degree in civil engineering.

Following his graduation from the University of Georgia, he served four years with the U.S. Forest Service. He worked out of the forest service's New Orleans office four years — 1933-37. Forman served four years in the army, 1942-46, during World War II.

After joining the highway department here in 1946, he rose to senior project engineer in 1947 and to assistant district engineer for maintenance in 1955.

Wilder joined the highway department in 1950 as a roadman with a surveying crew, two years after his graduation from Ruston High School.

He has served with the department since, except for a four-year period with the Louisiana Lumber Industry and a three-year period during World War II.

After his return from service in 1946, Wilder became project engineer in 1948 and maintenance engineer in 1952.

$427,000 THEFT

Past Retirement Banker Is Charged

SELMA, Ala. (AP) — A bank cashier who had special permission to work beyond normal retirement age was charged Friday with stealing $427,000 from the bank over a 35-year period.

High Edward Campbell, 65, was arraigned before a U.S. commissioner on a federal complaint that he violated the Federal Reserve Act. He entered no plea and waived his case to the next federal grand jury. He failed to post a $75,000 bond and was remanded to jail.

Campbell is a native of Selma and had worked at the Selma National Bank since 1920.

Bank President Roger Jones and FBI agents sought to learn how bank funds could have been disappearing so long without detection. Agents said that apparently the most money taken at any one time was about $500.

Jones said the bank, a depository for 24 other banks, was fully covered by insurance. Business went on as usual Friday at the bank, one of four regular deposit banks in this southern Alabama city of 30,000.

Edwin Tully, FBI agent at Mobile, said Campbell was arrested Friday night.

Other agents said they had no indication that any of the money was available for restitution.

Canada Chief May Suspend Parliament

OTTAWA (AP) — Prime Minister John G. Diefenbaker held a round of closed-door talks Friday that served to heighten speculation that he will dissolve Parliament soon. This would open the way for new elections, with the U.S.-Canadian controversy over nuclear weapons as a prime issue.

Afterward, the prime minister would not divulge details of his talks. He refused to say whether he had discussed dissolution, which would be followed by elections in which he would seek to recapture a majority of seats for his Conservative party.

The House of Commons adjourned until Monday afternoon. Diefenbaker told newsmen he was unaware there had been suspense over a possible dissolution Friday night. Asked if he planned any announcements today, he said there would be a morning Cabinet session.

Dissolution can be announced at any time, whether or not Parliament is sitting.

The question was whether Diefenbaker would try to take political advantage of repercussions from what he called U.S. intrusion into Canadian affairs.

This grew out of Washington's demand that Canada decide whether it shall have nuclear weapons and the best use of Canada's defense against possible Soviet aggression has been a hot political issue.

Washington has demanded that Canada take a clear stand on accepting nuclear warheads for U.S.-sponsored Bomarc missiles and Voodoo interceptor jets at home and in Europe.

But the Canadian government says it still is seeking an agreement with Washington on control of the weapons because it does not want to enlarge the so-called nuclear club of nations possessing nuclear weapons.

New Buildup Figures Are Said Known

Sen. Thurmond
Says Red General
Is Leading Troops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., said Friday there are reliable estimates that between 30,000 and 40,000 troops in Cuba are under command of a Soviet general. A Pentagon spokesman contradicted the statement.

"Behind the brush curtain around Cuba is a formidable Soviet strategic military base," Thurmond said in a weekly newsletter to constituents.

LISTS ARMS

He listed an array of missiles, bombers and other armament which he said "indicates the presence of a complete Soviet army, and the inventory normally assigned to a Soviet air army."

A few hours after Thurmond made the remarks public, a Pentagon spokesman told newsmen: "The information contained in Sen. Thurmond's weekly newsletter is at wide variance with carefully evaluated data collected by U.S. intelligence from continued surveillance and other sources."

"The information obtained by our intelligence has been and is being made public to the extent it does not compromise intelligence sources."

"If Sen. Thurmond has proof of any kind to support the information he has released, which differs from official intelligence information, the Department of Defense would like to receive the evidence."

Thurmond made public his estimates — without identifying his sources — as a Senate Armed Services subcommittee tagged the Cuban situation for an early investigation.

Ex-President Of Police Jury Not Candidate

M. W. Montgomery, member of the Ouachita Parish Police Jury from ward three, told the Morning World Friday night that he does not plan to seek re-election to a fourth term.

In confirming that he would not be a candidate in the December election, Montgomery's only comment was "I have had enough of it."

He said, however, that he would issue a full statement later.

Montgomery currently is serving his third term and 12th year on the Police Jury.

He served six years as president of the L. B. Pettit. Montgomery presently is serving as chairman of the jury's purchasing committee, vice chairman of the budget committee and library committee, and is a member of the finance, stock law and road committees.

OFFICE SURRENDERED

Town's Defiance To U.S. Is Over

Citizens of Mound City, once reinforced by their Indian friends, stepped aside as federal authorities moved into the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service office.

For months the town had rebelled over federal demands that farm records be handed over. They sandbagged the office, and served picket duty to prevent government officials from seizing the office and the records.

But attorney Morris Myers said Friday he had received assurances from Asst. Dist. Atty. Travis Lewin that the location of the Campbell County ASCS office would be decided in a "just manner," equitable to both county's residents and the federal government.

The records were sealed behind the sandbagged office in June of 1961 when the Agriculture Department decided to move the ASCS headquarters in the county to nearby Herreid.

Continental Can Official Is Threatened

A 27-year-old Jonesboro man was in Lincoln Parish jail Friday night charged with a violation of the Federal Extortion Statute after being picked up earlier by F.B.I. agents from Monroe, Shreveport and New Orleans.

John E. Pollard, 27, W. Main St., Jonesboro, is charged with threatening to bomb Frank E. Johnson, manager of the Hedge plant of Continental Can Co.

Pollard was apprehended at his home around 5 p.m. after complaints were filed Friday by the F.B.I. in Monroe.

CHARGE

The complaints charged that Pollard had deposited or cause to be deposited in the U.S. Mails at Hedge a letter addressed to Frank E. Johnson, which demanded $25,000 under threat of being blown up.

Harry G. Maynor, special agent in charge of the New Orleans office of the F.B.I., said Pollard would be brought from Ruston to Monroe for the earliest possible time for a hearing before U.S. Commissioner Richard Pipes.

He said it would probably be today.

No bond has been set pending the hearing.

Johnson, the intended victim, could offer no explanation as to why he should be singled out in the scheme, saying only someone was "out for money and me being plant manager, I would be known."

He said he hardly knew Pollard. (Continued on Page Five-A)

Passman Says Tax Move Is Bad Business

Congressman Otto E. Passman described President Kennedy's tax reform bill Friday as being "inconsistent with good business practices," charging that it was designed to win the 1964 election.

"If the Congress should enact the true tax reform bill, the President would veto the bill," Passman told the Monroe Optimist Club.

"What the administration really wants is something that will appeal to the masses to cinch the election for Mr. Kennedy in 1964," he said.

"We are now spending all the money that we collect in taxes and borrowing an average of $9-billion annually to meet our commitments both domestic and foreign," the Fifth District senator added.

The bill, which the administration says will amount to a $12-billion reduction for taxpayers, is "inconsistent with good business practices unless the expenditure of running the government are reduced by a figure as great as the proposed tax reduction," Passman explained.

He said that in his opinion whatever tax reduction is made would have to be borrowed or added to the "ever increasing annual deficit."

If this should happen, Passman said two results would follow:

1. Unbearable public debt. 2. Continuing reduction the purchasing power of the dollar.

Passman, returning to Washington today after spending a few days here, reminded the Optimists that the 1940 dollar was now worth 43 cents.

Republican Good News

If office elections can be considered weather vane for public sentiment towards officials, then the recent California special election to fill the seat won by the late Rep. Gen. Miller in the U.S. House of Representatives is no soon after the last election must really be an indicator of the New Frontier.

Donald H. Miller, who won the seat from the Fifth District in the Golden State, was defeated in the ball for the same seat in an earlier election. But Rep. Miller was killed in a plane crash during the campaign.

The answer to the question of the series of elections is not that a lead was won, but that a lead was lost. President Kennedy's promise of a new frontier in the form of tax reductions for the people, the "good news" of the election of a Republican.

Apparently, the people are not looking for a new frontier and have turned their backs on the New Frontier. As many as 100,000 votes were predicted to go to the death of the New Frontier.

So did the Cuban crisis disappear. And Russians are still in Cuba. So, the people in California at least, have not been fooled and see the President in the proper perspective.

Rep. Bob Wilson, chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, called the election a "first evidence of a taxpayer revolt" and there is probably more truth to that statement than usual in partisan election comments.

There is an old saying that you can fool some of the people all of the time, all the people some of the time, but not all the people all the time. The California election last week bears this out better than all of the rhetoric in the world.

And, so ironically, it came after President Kennedy had made his most dramatic and universally appealing offer to the voters — a cut in their heavy burden of taxation.

So, pessimists, take heart! Those who think that the voters are turning away from this kind of hope. All is not well on the New Frontier. It is the first warning in the New Frontier.

May Help Everybody

Non-union workers in the United States are not getting a fair share of the good news known as the railroad work practices problem.

The case went there to win an appeal made by the operating railway union, from a court decision meaning that railroads can hire non-union workers. The court decision was a victory for the union, but it was a defeat for the non-union workers. The court decision was a victory for the union, but it was a defeat for the non-union workers.

Railroad action in this matter was based on the findings of a government-appointed board which the court investigated the work practices problem.

It found that great numbers of jobs are no longer needed and should be abolished. At the same time it proposed that this should be done over a gradual period of time to alleviate the difficulties of readjustment, and that the railroads should provide, at their expense, substantial benefits of various kinds to displaced workers.

The human element was given full consideration and sympathy. The railroads accepted these recommendations.

No matter what the court may decide, the experiences of those must be an end to workless jobs.

In the long run, waste helps nobody. A system of keeping workers in places where there was no work for them to do was instituted at the expense of the non-union workers. The court decision was a victory for the union, but it was a defeat for the non-union workers.

In the long run, waste helps nobody and hurts everybody. It hurts the industry concerned, which is saddled with debilitating financial losses. It hurts the worker whose opportunities would increase if industry were free to operate with maximum efficiency. It hurts the public, which is entitled to the best of service.

'Tantamount' Is Fading

Appearing in Memphis recently, Republican National Chairman William E. Miller said one word often used by Democrats or by those referring to Democrats might as well be removed from the English language. He said the word "tantamount" is dead.

The chairman stated the 1962 congressional elections "resulted in a two-party system being firmly installed throughout the south. Never again can a Democrat take its election for granted or say its nomination in the Democratic primary is tantamount to election."

If the word "tantamount" is to follow the dodo bird into extinction, it apparently deserves some sort of requiem. A synonym book gives the following words as meaning the same thing or about the same thing: equivalent, equal, identical, convertible, synonymous, alike, comparable with, similar, analogous, correlative, correspondent, all the same, selfsame, same, ditto, indistinguishable.

Among these at least the word "equivalent" seems a worthy substitute. Since "tantamount" apparently is never used in any sense other than saying a Democrat's nomination in the south is "tantamount" to election, it is a wonder here was ever any necessity for saying it.

At any rate, Chairman Miller says there will never be another occasion to use that word since the two-party system has been established in the south and it looks as if he might be about right.

Some Texas candidates who were running on "tantamount" to win or lose in the general election were defeated by their Republican opponents. The same was true in some other states. Even in Louisiana some of the Democratic candidates knew that "tantamount" was not enough and went out and campaigned as vigorously as if they were in a Democrat primary.

That is a good situation.

The labor movement among African workers has resulted in the organization of five million workers, an increase of two million since 1958.

Carbon monoxide causes more deaths annually than any other poison.

The 1962 Christmas stamp, a wreath and candle design in red and green, was the first stamp to mark a holiday season.

From 1952 to 1961, 30,000 immigrant engineers and 14,000 physicians entered the country, according to the Labor Department.

The number of working women has increased from 16.5 million to 22.5 million the last 10 years. The proportion of married women working outside their homes has risen from 22 to 31 per cent during the decade.

At least 70 different postage stamps, including 15 different three-cent stamps, have borne the likeness of George Washington.

BASCOM TIMMONS

Schools Hit By Federal Authorities

Southwestern schools near military bases with racial barriers still exist under Federal attack. Most of them are not under any immediate threat of Federal suits, but the government money, reported to help them take care of Federal employee children is in danger of being dried up.

The first move in the assault came from the Justice Department Jan. 16, when the department filed suits to integrate schools in four counties in Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana — all near large military bases.

According to high Justice Department officials, the move was something more than a test case. If the department simply wanted to test the law, it would have needed to file only one suit.

But, this doesn't mean there will be a series of similar suits. In fact, the department has said it may not file more than one suit in each area with not be a test case.

There are several reasons why the Justice Department will not move quickly to halt discrimination against children of Federal employees.

The department routinely tries to encourage local authorities to lower racial barriers on their own before filing suits.

In Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, Justice Department officials talked with local officials before the suits were filed in an attempt to get them to desegregate voluntarily.

The department held up legal action against three Georgia cities near military bases because local officials were making a real effort to reach a solution in Albany, Savannah and Columbus.

A Justice Department official said Administration insider put it like this: "Whenever there was some hope that it could be worked out on the local level, we would be sympathetic." He added, "We would rather do it that way than bring suit."

There also is a feeling in the department that once the point of law is established and the courts have spoken, "then people go ahead and do it themselves," as one official said.

The department seeks to prove in these cases that the government can initiate an action. In many instances, the courts have said only individuals can file suit to halt any abridgement of their rights.

A third compelling reason the department will not rush into court with many similar suits is that it lacks the manpower.

But, all of this is no reason for Southern school administrators to breathe easy. They likely will have to tighten their belts, because the federal "impacted area" program is in danger of becoming extinct.

This program was set up by Congress in 1950 to help school systems accommodate large numbers of servicemen's children and children of other Federal employees.

Since it was enacted, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare which administers the program has poured approximately $2.5 billion into 4100 school districts nationwide.

The legislation expires this year and must be renewed by Congress. It probably will lose the support of a number of Southern lawmakers who supported it in the past.

But, even if it passes, some Southern school districts stand to lose all or part of their "impacted aid."

Last March, former HEW Secretary Abraham Ribicoff announced that after September 1963 the government will regard segregated schools as no longer "suitable" for federal grants to help educate children whose parents live and work on Federal installations.

More recently, HEW said it may have to build and operate integrated schools on military bases in Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina and Georgia.

Assistant HEW Secretary James Quigley said Texas and Florida have agreed to integrate schools near nine Air Force bases.

Shipping Curb Is Blocked

State Department Thwarts Promulgation Of Executive Order To Tighten Curbs Against Cuba

The State Department is blocking the promulgation of an executive order to tighten curbs on Western and neutral shipping to Cuba, which the Maritime Administration drafted and sent to the Department more than a month ago.

There has been no official explanation for this extraordinary stalling.

Indignant members of Congress have been told the stalled Cuban shipping ban will eventually be issued. But they have been unable to get any concrete information when this may be.

Only possible clue to the timing is an indication from aides of Secretary Dean Rusk that the shipping curbs is being held up until next month's meeting of the Organization of American States. Main purpose of this session is to raise additional economic and political barriers against the Communist Cuban regime.

According to Rusk's assistants, the long delayed shipping curb will not be announced as a demonstration of this country's tougher policy toward Cuba.

Actually, the State Department has been dragging its feet on this shipping crackdown since last August when such curbs were first considered by the Kennedy Administration. At the President's December 11 press conference, one of these communists inquired the reason for this mysterious delay and when some action might be expected.

The President replied that could be looked for within several weeks.

Two weeks later, on December 26, the general counsel's office of the Maritime Administration sent a carefully drafted shipping curb to the State Department for approval.

This was the last heard of it. It has been gathering dust at the Department ever since.

This pigeonholed order is designed to accomplish two ends: 1) Exclude Western and neutral ships carrying Soviet Bloc cargoes to Cuba from U.S. ports; 2) bar them from transporting U.S. foreign aid supplies — a very lucrative traffic.

Maritime officials, who strongly favor these curbs, view them as imposing greatly increased burdens on Russia to supply Cuba.

Recovery Is Frequent In Bad Strokes

Dear Dr. Steinerhorn: I know that strokes are serious things, but isn't it true that a person can have one and still go on later living practically a normal life? — Mrs. H.

Comment: If it weren't true, chances are that many millions of us wouldn't have seen the movie called "Louis Pasteur." For he would have been dead after a stroke long before he was able to make his famed fermentation studies and his other contribution which lead to pasteurization and vaccine immunization. Pasteur lived to 73, but the last few decades of his life — in which he made many important contributions to mankind — followed a stroke. So you see, Mrs. H., many stroke victims can carry on for years.

Of course strokes come in different sizes, you might say. A severe stroke holds out no hope whatever. The patient may die within hours. This is usually due to an extensive hemorrhage in the brain due to rupture of an artery.

In some cases, the patient is unconscious for less than 24 hours and recovers with paralysis of an arm and leg and possible loss of speech. Such patients may partially recover their speech and use of extremities and live many years.

In thousands of others there is a temporary loss of speech and inability to move an arm or leg. The trouble seems to clear up within a few days.

I have known some patients to have two or three such "cerebral accidents" and apparently fully recover to carry on their business and social life as if nothing had happened. In these patients, a small blood vessel in the brain has been blocked off by what we call a cerebral thrombus, or there has been some unexplained spasm in an artery. In either case, blood circulation to the vital cells in the brain has not been shut off sufficiently long to produce any lasting damage.

In still other cases, who make no suspicion of trouble in the brain's circulation, by special inspections and X-rays of the large arteries in the neck we can see evidence of a slow closing off of the circulation by atherosclerosis. It is in such cases that modern surgery often can prevent a major stroke.

Does this answer your question, Mrs. H.?

Insurance Needs

More Money Being Paid To Policyholders Than Survivors

With over $600 billion of life insurance in force, Americans are the most life-insured people in the world.

Are we over-insured? While in terms of the premium paid, many policyholders would probably answer a resounding "yes," life insurance in force among all U.S. families averages only $10,000. A little known point is that in recent years benefit payments to policyholders themselves in the form of cash redemptions, health and disability payments, annuities, etc., which insurance people like to call "living" benefits, far outnumber death benefit payments. In 1961, out of a total $8.8 billion in benefits paid to U.S. families under various types of life insurance policies and annuities, $5.2 billion went to policyholders themselves and only $3.6 billion to survivors.

Here, from Gilbert W. Fitzhugh, the new president of the nation's largest insurance company, Metropolitan Life, are other points about the insurance industry's problems and outlook today.

Porter: What is your answer to Medicare?

Fitzhugh: Voluntary efforts must find ways to provide needed care for the aged and actually there are many plans in existence now. "New York 65," a co-operative effort covering over 65 residents of New York State, enrolled 110,000 people in one month on an experimental basis last year. There are similar plans in Connecticut and Massachusetts and others are contemplated. Also many companies have plans of their own, both life insurance and casualty insurance companies. The number of people over 65 with coverage is rising rapidly.

Our long-range answer to medical care for the aged is group insurance plans. Around 70 per cent of our own group plans now offer continuing benefits after you retire. The trouble is that people who retired 10 years ago didn't have this kind of coverage. We feel that it doesn't make sense to put in a huge compulsory program to meet this temporary problem. Naturally, we should do what we can to fill in the gaps, and insurance companies are offering more comprehensive medical plans all the time.

Porter: What is the biggest challenge facing your industry now?

Fitzhugh: To keep up with the tremendous change in our market, primarily the immense bulge which is coming in the family formation 18-24 year age bracket. This is a prime market for life insurance.

The population also is shifting to the suburbs and increasing its earnings — both of which mean new ambitions for chil-

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

IS BOXING WORTH IT?

An English neurologist, Dr. John D. Sullivan, wrote an article on "Five Boxes" that appeared in the British Medical Journal. An expert professional boxer, and a doctor, Sullivan had definite evidence of brain injury, the fifth is subject to episodes of aggressive behavior that bring him into conflict with the law.

The first man, now 45, started boxing at age 17, fought 50 bouts, and was knocked out only once. He retired at age 35, but his boxing habit, said Sullivan, was a factor in his aggressive behavior, and he was still of boxing habit.

The second fighter became a policeman and policeman, his untrained and childishness have worsened during this period. He is still a policeman, and has trouble with his behavior, and fighting. His speech is slurred and he is unable to speak clearly and articulately.

But the third, a part of the story, the boxer, because involved, raised the many symptoms. In addition to the boxer, he suffers from headache, dizziness, numbness, and loss of appetite. Prolonged bouts of blurring of vision occur in which he sees the top half of an object but the lower half of the area.

The story of this boxer is similar to that of the others. Change in speech, intellect, and memory are common. One is a child, and another is a "wild type" of person, but not much of a boxer. These men have headaches, dizziness, numbness, and the typical flat, tired nose. Their professional careers averaged 17 years, and some appeared to accumulate enough material wealth to make boxing worth the damage to the body.

The term punch drunk was introduced in 1924 by Dr. H. S. Marshall, pathologist of Newark's City Hospital. Some authorities doubt or will not admit the existence of the syndrome. They assert the effects of concussion are temporary, but most of their studies were done on active professional boxers. The survey on the five English boxers was made to determine what happens to the brain in later years. In all probability, most boxers, escape permanent injury, but it may be they were lucky.

SCATIA AND NUMBERS

I, R. writes: I have a question on the left leg. Now the foot on that side is numb. Does this mean a stroke?

REPLY

No, it means pressure on the nerve has increased and, unless something is done to alleviate the cause, the sciatic nerve may be damaged beyond repair. You need a neurologist, because a slipped disk in the lower back is the commonest cause of the syndrome you mention.

REPLY

Yes, to both questions. The liver, in aging persons, is getting old and cannot take the added abuse as it could when the individual was young.

BLOOD CHANGES IN MONO

R. R. writes: Why are periodic blood tests necessary after recovery from a severe case of infectious mononucleosis?

REPLY

I don't know. Certain blood changes may remain for months after recovery, but they have no significance.

BLEEDING IN INSIDE

A. O. writes: Is there any other way to bleed in cerebral hemorrhage?

REPLY

No, unless it comes from a head injury or skull fracture. TODAY'S HEALTH HINT—Needing may cause wheezing.

Rebellious Karen Tribesmen Stage Big Border Raid

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP)—Rebellious Karen tribesmen struck across the border from Burma this week in their biggest raid since May 1961, Bangkok newspapers reported Friday. Thai police reinforcements were parachuted into the isolated border region after 500 rebels attacked the Thai town of Mae Sod, 25 air miles northwest of Bangkok, on Wednesday. The rebels were driven off after bitter fighting. Their leader was reported among those killed. The Karens have revolted against Burmese authorities in a campaign of terrorism on both sides of the jungle-covered Thai-Burmese frontier.

ON HIGH-VOLTAGE LINES

Tightrope Walker Flees East Berlin

BERLIN (UPI)—An East German tightrope walker, using his skill and daring, swung hand over hand for 100 yards on a 110,000-volt power line spanning the border to escape to the West, West Berlin police disclosed Friday.

Klein, a veteran of high wire acts in 18 countries, had no audience for the greatest performance of his life. It took place in the darkness of the night of Dec. 27. West Berlin officials kept the flight secret for more than a month because they believed the Communists did not know of the escape route.

The aerial artist's skill got him across the border, but even he could not hold out against the 12-degree cold. No longer able to grip the cable after reaching West Berlin, he fell to the ground. He suffered two broken arms and other injuries.

Heard it accidentally

Klein said he found his over- head escape route by accident. Frustrated by East German restrictions on his circus travel, he went to the border hoping to crawl through the barbed wire, but found it too heavily guarded. Then he stumbled into the base of a steel mast carrying the power cables across the border.

Hidden from the border police by darkness, Klein climbed swiftly up the mast until he reached the cables. But because of the danger of being electrocuted, he said, "I knew that I must not touch the cables while I was still holding to the mast."

He leaped into the darkness, catching one of the big porcelain insulators supporting the cables. Then, his feet free of the tower, he was able to grasp the live wire without being killed.

Slowly Klein swung along the cable, gripping it with both hands. To rest, he pulled himself up and sat astride the cable.

Klein had about 50 yards to go when he found that his frozen hands were tiring. Finally he had to release his grip and plunged to the ground.

Knocked him out

The fall knocked Klein unconscious. Although he landed in West Berlin territory he still was in firing range of the Communists, and a small river lay between him and the West Berlin guards.

"I must have lain there about three hours," he said. "I had terrible pains in my arms. I called out for help."

The final act of the escape nearly ended in tragedy. A West Berlin fireman paddled across the river in a rubber boat. Klein was so weak he could only roll toward the bank. Unable to stop, he rolled in the water and nearly drowned. The firemen pulled him to safety.

Why did Klein risk his life to escape?

"You can't transplant an artist into a factory," he said. "I couldn't live without the tanbark and the circus air. I had to flee."

Commutation Is Denied To Dr. Sheppard

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Gov. James A. Rhodes has denied commutation of sentence for Dr. Samuel H. Sheppard.

The governor, in a Friday afternoon announcement, said he has sent his decision to the Parole and Pardon Commission.

Thus closed another avenue of freedom for the man serving a life term for the murder of his wife, Marilyn. Under Ohio law, he must serve a minimum of 10 years, with time off for good behavior, before he could be considered for parole.

Bailey argued Tuesday that Sheppard's medical services and general conduct while in prison have earned a reduction in sentence to many months or commutation to time already served.

Heightening the drama of Tuesday's clemency hearing was the appearance of Ariane Tebbenjohanns, 33, a divorcee from Düsseldorf, West Germany. She says letters exchanged with Sheppard since 1960 led to their becoming engaged when she visited him for the first time last week at Marion Correctional Institution.

But Ohio's correction commissioner, Maury C. Koblenz, says he still isn't certain of the relationship, even after talking for two hours with Sheppard. Until it is clarified, he says, she will not be allowed to visit or write to Sheppard.

French, Soviets Sign Three-Year Trade Contract

MOSCOW (UPI) — France signed a three-year trade agreement Friday with the Soviet Union providing for an increase of 10 to 15 per cent in trade between the two nations, French diplomatic sources here said.

The value of goods to be exchanged was estimated at between $1 and $1.2 billion. It was understood the Soviet would export coal and oil to France while the French would ship industrial equipment to the Soviet.

Disclosure of the agreement came three days after France had vetoed Britain's bid to enter the European Common Market.

It followed a spate of speculation in European capitals that French President Charles de Gaulle was stepping up a grand design plan envisaging a "Europe from the Atlantic to the Uralis."

A French source said the agreement covered the years 1963, 1964 and 1965 and called for an increase of trade "in the two directions."

Canada Nuclear Weapons Action To Be Explained

WASHINGTON (AP)—Administration officials will be asked to explain to senators Monday the disagreement with Canada over that country's refusal thus far to accept nuclear weapons for continental defense.

Sen. George D. Aiken, R-Vt., announced Friday a Foreign Relations subcommittee he heads will explore with executive department officials "recent charges and countercharges that have been made with respect to supplying nuclear arms to Canadian forces."

Aiken's announcement followed a news conference statement by Secretary of State Dean Rusk that the United States regrets any offense it may have given Canada by a statement Wednesday on that nation's nuclear policy.

Aiken said in a statement the Monday inquiry has the approval of Chairman J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., of the full committee.

Golfers And Spectators

One of the biggest headaches that plagues the big time golfer, pro or amateur, is the noisy, inconsiderate spectator — This is a particular breed of spectator and, while there are not very many of them around, one is too many. This type of spectator that walks off from the bunch of players that he has been following just as the last player is about to putt — or it can be the TV announcer that gets a dirty look from Arnold Palmer because he is making too much noise. Yes, the good player requires quiet so that he can give his full concentration toward the execution of the shot — now don't ask us why, just try it yourself — it's self explanatory! Anyway, take our word for it, it requires a minimum of unrelated and unexpected noise. The slightest wrong movement in a golf swing can create greater differences in the result than any other sport ever known to man! Ben Hogan (the despised photographer because of their noisy movie cameras — Tournaments are very strict about cameras today) once said that the man who wins the tournament is the man who hits the least number of bad shots; he said that he himself never hit more than 3 or 4 of what he termed perfectly hit shots in 72 holes. He contended that it was so hard to strike a ball perfectly flush and have all the rest of the swing in perfect position at the same instant that it made it a game of the winner being the one to hit more shots less bad than the next guy.

DEFENDING champion of the Palm Springs Classic, Arnold Palmer, does the twist with Dan Crane, wife of singer Buddy Greco, at a party given for the players in Palm Springs. At this writing, Palmer was 6 shots behind with rounds of 71-72 for a 143 total.

All this brings us to a story that comes to us from the recent San Francisco Open; Las Vegas pro Billy Maxwell ran into a real helpful spectator during Saturday's round of the tournament. This man was standing along the sidelines at Harding Park on the 16th hole, rattling money in his pocket while Billy's playing partner, Gardner Dickinson, was trying to putt.

In an attempt to be nice about it, Billy said in a low voice to the spectator: "Have you got change for a dollar?" The spectator trotted right over, pulling change out of his pocket and assuring the astonished Maxwell that it would be a pleasure. Billy walked away shaking his head.

Garner Dickinson, Ben Hogan's one-time protege and winner of last year's Coral Gables Open, was upset in a similar instance during the first round of the Palm Springs Classic now in progress. He almost holed out on the 18th hole for an eagle 3 but the ball lipped the cup and rolled a short distance past. Dickinson stepped up to the short putt and was about to tap it in for the birdie when a spectator snapped a flashbulb. He missed the putt and settled for a tie for first place that day rather than picking up the bonus check for the lowest round of the day.

PGA Having Problems

The Professional Golfers Association decided to cut out a couple of the regular stops for the pros this year with the contention that there were too many tournaments. Baton Rouge was one of the eliminations.

Now the PGA is having trouble getting sponsors to "obey orders" at Salt Lake City. On top of that, it's been reported that sponsors of the Eastern Open in Baltimore are just about fed up with the PGA's foolishness and are about ready to call that tournament off — The rift started when one of the lords of the tour called a lady spectator something other than nice.

No guessing which tournament will go down the drain next — the PGA tells everyone how to mow his own back yard and finally the people are getting tired of it. The PGA also turned down a bid by Ben Hogan for five 200 thousand dollar tournaments. It's been said that the million-dollar offer was turned down because of scheduling difficulties. We wonder.

DESPITE SANDSTORM

Nicklaus Holds Five Stroke Classic Lead

By BOB MYERS

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The National Open champion Jack Nicklaus battered par and battled threats fell back Tommy Aaron hit a 9-iron from 149 yards out a desert sandstorm Friday in the 54-hole 211 group. Australia's Bruce turned it back over the score of 202 and a commanding Crampton soared to a 75 for 213. green. He pitched up but had to lead of five strokes in the 550,000 "I wish I had started at 9 two-putt and took a bogey."

The 23-year-old Nicklaus got in a hole in the 11th. He proached the green with a hook his best shot before a high wind blew up in mid-afternoon, then managed to coast home on his last nine holes in even par.

Nicklaus played the Bermuda Dunes Country Club course, which has par of 36-36-72.

His nearest rival, with two more rounds to go in this 90-hole golfing marathon, was young Johnny Pott, who had a 207.

In third was another long shot who remained in contention, Bob Shaye Jr., with a 72 for 207. Nicklaus started the round with a one-stroke advantage over Shaye and South Africa's Gary Player.

Player encountered the same burst of wind and sand, and for the first time in three days his putter failed him. Player ended with a 73 and a tie at 209 with Al Gerberger, who shot a 69, and Gardner Dickinson who had a 79.

The defending tournament champion, Arnold Palmer, after making a challenge to get back into the picture with 2 strokes under par for his first time, took a 38 on his final nine for a 71 and a total of 214.

Palmer's main blowup came on the first hole—he played the back nine first—when he shot out of the hole with a 4.

If you've never used Classified Ads it's time you joined the far-sighted folks who have found they're just what the doctor ordered for curing badly strained budgets. It's easy, it's fun — and it works like this.

Take a look through your home for the worthwhile items you no longer use or need. Things like furniture, appliances, heaters, power tools, fire-place equipment, skates, skis — just about everything you find has a cash buyer waiting for you to offer it to him in the Classified columns.

After you've made out your list — just dial FA 2-5161 and give it to the friendly, experienced Ad Writer who answers. That's all there is to it. The cost? Surprisingly low. A 10 word ad is only $1.44 per day on the special 7 day rate.

Soon, often in as little time as just one day, you have extra cash you never would have had without fast-action News-Star-World Classified Ads. Place your ad today. It's an eye-opening experience — and a mighty profitable one.
